Chair's overview of the past year:

The membership of the committee changed significantly during the year in question. At the beginning of the year membership was declining both in number and expertise; a relatively 'low level' recruitment campaign was remarkably successful and quoracy problems have been averted. It has never been necessary to cancel any meeting as a result of inquoracy nor has it been necessary to co-opt additional members. All new members have settled into the Committee extremely well and several are now comfortable in undertaking extra sub-committee and PRC work in addition to the main business. Seven new members were appointed during the year, one member resigned as a result of external pressures and four members resigned having completed their contracted terms of office. Whilst the Committee has been able to sustain its core business it is unfortunate that the resignations have included a statistician, a consultant physician and a very experienced biomedical scientist; these losses have been largely compensated by the efforts of other members. Given the number and nature of the Committee 'flags' I am firmly of the belief that this expertise should be replaced, however attempts to do so have been declined as a result of the continuing closures and mergers programme. I fully understand the need for cautious recruitment at this stage but I hope that this matter can be resolved over the forthcoming year.

Approximately half way through the year the Committee experienced significant administrative changes as a result of closure of the Reading office and relocation to the Bristol Centre. My opinion with regard to the geographical changes was, and remains, largely positive given my support for remote working and conducting as much business online as possible. The Committee already had robust arrangements for online review of reports, responses to provisional opinions and conducting sub-committee business so the relocation made little difference. The biggest loss to the Committee was that of the assistant coordinator, Lavenda Lee and the temporary coordinator, Megan Walmsley, who, despite her 'temp' status was remarkably able and efficient. I am very pleased to report that Megan was seamlessly replaced by Rae. It is probably fair to state that it took some time for the Bristol Centre and its numerous newly appointed staff to function efficiently and effectively and I did experience several administrative frustrations. My impression was that Rae (and others) was over-worked and that systems were taking some time to settle; it was however clear that Rae made every effort to accommodate all of my requests (no doubt, some of which were irritatingly idiosyncratic) and by the end of the reporting year things were running much more smoothly. At the time of writing this report (August 2012) I am clear that administrative support is largely very effective; Rae has continued to accommodate new and increasingly effective procedures which, no doubt, has been helped by some rationalisation of her workload. Notwithstanding changes of membership and administration, the Committee was successfully audited in October 2011 and complimented on some aspects of its operation.

The clear trend has been a declining number of applications for review by full committee, which I believe should be welcomed. In common with other committees, Berkshire REC has benefitted from the introduction of PR; by the end of this reporting period we were piloting an online reviewing PR reviewing system using Google software. In my opinion, the time saved as a result of fewer applications was put to good use. We have been able to spend more time on updating and informal education; for example I gave a presentation on the revised version of GAfREC more than 2 months before it came into force. The Committee has also been able to focus upon and discuss in much more detail, matters of ethics thus marking a shift from being overly preoccupied with policy and procedure. Discussions on ethics have included debates about tensions between individual autonomy and the common good, respecting the autonomy of children, and inducement and coercion. Much of this discussion was initiated in response to review of specific studies; some has been inspired by advice from the NREAP. In similar vein it has been possible to devote more time to shared ethical debate exercises and I think that Berkshire has been a strong contributor to this national strategy. I am also of the opinion that fewer reviews by full committee has been helpful in informally educating new members – there has been time to pause and provide explanation.

Outside of the main business I had a particularly busy year. There were several occasions involving lengthy conference calls as a result of appeals, breaches of protocol and challenges to unfavourable and provisional opinions. I believe that there is an increasing tendency to challenge the Committee's opinions by appealing to the Chair; needless to say, these strategies are unsuccessful but nevertheless extremely time consuming. On a more positive note there were many informal enquiries and requests for advice and support; in the main enquirers were extremely grateful and were positive about the service as a whole. I believe that Berkshire enjoys a good reputation within the research community – though obviously it is difficult to substantiate such a claim. It is hard to estimate my workload over the year but I believe that Berkshire is one of the busiest committees partly as a result of inherited business from previous closures and mergers. Whilst busy, I am delighted to report that I have found the year challenging and enjoyable. I am more than aware that I equally challenged others within the organisation but I remain a loyal supporter of it.
